VISS 501: Introduction to Visual Studies: Methods and Debates

Professor Vanessa R. Schwartz
Fall 2017, USC

Wednesday, 2-5, Taper 308
Office Hours: Wednesday, 5-6, Taper 336 and by appointment at vschwart@usc.edu

Seminar Description:
Over the last two decades, Visual Studies has gained wide currency as a field of research and teaching in universities both in the United States and abroad. Scholars from disciplines as diverse as art history, American studies, literature, anthropology, film and media studies, history and gender studies have focused attention on both the cultural specificity of vision and on the ever-widening array of images and objects available for viewing.

This course will provide a critical introduction to the history, methods and central debates within the field. How have scholars and critics taken up – or in some cases dismissed - the study of visual culture and to what ends? What are the limits and possibilities of the interdisciplinary models on offer? We will explore these questions through a sustained engagement with selected texts that are rich in methodological orientation and that address such subjects as definitions of the image, the experience of seeing, the science of vision, constructions of visuality and the experience and creation of visual objects.

This course is one of two required courses as part of the USC’s VSGC.

Readings and Seminar Participation: Readings are extensive. Our primary task as individuals is to read with care. As a group, our goal is to engage in a discussion that helps illuminate the readings. Seminar participation will be considered an essential component of the class.

Expectations and Requirements: Students are expected to complete all required reading prior to seminar meetings and to discuss the texts and critical issues at hand during each session.
Each student must also post a “response” to the week’s readings on the class electronic blackboard by no later than 5 am Wednesday morning, although posts earlier are welcomed. Students are also expected to read each other’s responses before class and thus we may need to adjust the deadline for submission based on the needs of the group. A response can be a critical summary of the readings, a series of questions, complaints, rants. The idea behind them is to ask each student to take some time reflecting on the week’s readings and share those thoughts with the class.

Special Events and Lectures: As part of this seminar you are expected to attend at least two special events and preferably all if it is possible. All special events are listed below:

FINAL PROJECT: You must listen to at least two podcasts a week from the BBC Series, “A History of the World in 100 Objects.” (http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b00nrd2/episodes/downloads?page=4) In addition, please screen Kenneth Clark’s Civilisation series by the 12th week of classes.

The final exercise in this class is to take any object or lesson about the visual you want to prepare (perhaps related to your own research) and make a short film or powerpoint or other sort of slideshow of this “lesson” about the object or problem. In other words, your final project is to “visualize” a lesson about the visual past. In addition, you are to write a 10-12 page paper, “Visualizing Knowledge” which reflects on the methods and approaches you used in making your project. This paper will consider the different “theories and methods” and definitions of Visual Studies through your visual presentation of your object and visual lesson. Students are asked to reflect upon the specific issue of the production of the image and producers, circulation, materiality, technology, and knowledge construction relating to vision, visuality, images, seeing, and spectacle. In other words, how and why is this an object that relates to a field that might be called “Visual Studies” that is different from how you might have treated this in your home discipline, or is it different at all?
